Forwarded from Gethin Rees:

The British Library are advertising placements for PhD students, several of which might be of interest.

May I draw your attention to the placement titled 'Identifying and using map images in born-digital collections'.

<https://www.bl.uk/britishlibrary/~media/research%20collaboration%20webpace/placements%202019/digital%20map%20images.pdf>

The deadline for applications is 18 February 2019.

This is a great opportunity for a student with an interest in geography, maps and digital research to develop their skills and experience through working with the British Library's diverse digital collections.

Editor's note: there are also several other placements in this call for applications that may be of interest to digital classicists, including:

- Greek Papyri of Late Antique Egypt
- Illumination in Persian manuscripts
- Historic photographs of the Silk Road
- The oriental manuscripts collection of Sir William Jones \(1746-94\)

And potentially many others...
